Online and Other Forms of Surveillance - the Erosion of Privacy

A lot of questions but shortcoming answer depending on what we are expecting about the measures which should be available to detect and prosecute criminal offences.

In this context one must observe also an erosion of trust in the ability of the law enforcement and judicial authorities to guarantee freedom, security and justice.

This presentation will focus on the benchmarks set out in the jurisdiction of the European Court of Human Rights, the concept of Privacy and Secrecy of thoughts and the question if legislation could be found to strike for a balance.

Christian Pilnacek is head of unit in the directorate of penal legislation of the Austrian Federal Ministry of Justice. His unit is responsible for criminal procedural law.
